Pete Baker in "The Emigrant."
Pete Baker with his handsome face, graceful figure, and a voice that charms all, comes to the Opera House Monday week January 21st, with the richly dressed musical comedy entitled, "The Emigrant," reconstructed by himself and stuffed with new and popular songs. Mr. Baker has engaged a large company to support him.

The New Orleans Times Democrat, Monday, December 31, 1888, says: "Despite the slight drizzle which fell last evening, the Avenue Theatre was crowded from gallery to parquette, and before the curtain rose the sign of 'Standing Room Only' was hung out. 'Pete' Baker's coming was known to all and his previous successes in this city and elsewhere, had gained for him and his company a crowded house to witness the first performance here of 'The Emigrant.'"

Directors Elected.
The stockholders of the First National Bank met in the President's room Tuesday Jan. 8th, and elected the following directors for the ensuing year: S. B. Crumbaugh, J. P. Prouse, R. F. Hives, C. F. FOR THE KENTUCKIAN.

TRUST.

BY CHATELAIN.

It was a fair young man, of fragile form but bowed like lead to the pitiless storm. The wind swept by; then in modest pride the tree stood up, 'tis all settled! The sun rose high with its burning rays. He searched its leaves, with rapturous gaze. But the evening came with its gentle dew. And the tree looked up, and smiled anew. Then the white frost fell, and the leaves turned brown. And now, by one, came rustling down. When the sorrowful tree bent its form to the ground.

As "Old Winter's" chariot of ice flew past but the heart within was warm with love. With the faith that comes from restful sleep. And the tree pointed up with fringed hair saying "Heaven will hear my lone sad prayer." For Winter died on the lap of Spring. And merry little birds began to sing.

The tree looked up, its faith was strong. Saying "Heaven will hear and bless me long." The rain came down, with its musical voice. And the tree, did all nature rejoice. For little birds sang forth, and blossoms too. North the showers that fell like heavenly dew. Oh faithful heart: when earth chills thy joy. And disappointment thy spirit doth destroy. Look up with an eye of faith and see. It flows with blessing of love to thee. When the great-king rides in life's chariot. How humbly down he cannot harp. Though the heart-tails reach the noontide rays.

Look up a loving God to praise; Then the spirit will change to his new day. And the room will bring no harm to you. Life's storm will sweep you harmless by. If we look with an eye of faith on high.

Golden Wedding.
Mr. and Mrs. Richard Vaughan of Fairview, will on the 24th inst. celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage.

Alderman Henry C. Murpell, of Louisville, died last week.

THROUGH THE HEART.

DICK GARY INSTANTLY KILLED BY THE ACCIDENTAL DISCHARGE OF A PISTOL.

Full and Reliable Details of The Occurrence.

George Richard Gary, familiarly known as Dick Gary, son of R. S. Gary, a prominent citizen of the county, living three miles south of the city, was accidentally killed Wednesday. Soon after dinner he went into his mother's room at home and sat down by the window to clean his gun, preparatory to taking a hunt. After finishing the gun he got out his pistol, a .38 calibre Smith & Wesson, and began cleaning that also. The revolver was rusty and the cylinder would not pull out and while trying to draw it out with a pair of pliers, the muzzle being pointed toward his body, the weapon was discharged and the ball entered his body, passing through or near the lower part of his heart. No one was in the room at the time excepting his older brother James, who saw the accident. When the pistol fired he exclaimed, "Jim I'm shot!" and fell dead out of the chair in which he was sitting.

Mrs. Gary was in an adjoining room and rushed in upon hearing the shot, but when she reached him he was dead. The accident occurred at half past one o'clock. Mr. Gary, his father, was away from home but was sent for and soon arrived.

Deceased was 22 years of age and a young man of good habits and noble impulses. He had joined the Methodist church only about two weeks before and was leading a most exemplary life, though he had never been a very wild or dissipated boy. He was unmarried and had recently begun his life in the Northwestern Company for $5,000, payable to his mother.

No inquest was deemed necessary and the funeral was held yesterday at one o'clock p. m. and the remains were interred at the family burying ground in the vicinity.

BIOGRAPHICAL.

Sketch of Prof. C. H. Dietrich, Principal of the Hopkinsville Public Schools.

No city in Kentucky, however large, has a better system of schools than Hopkinsville. Ten years ago the city was almost entirely without common school facilities and was dependent wholly upon the colleges and private schools for the proper education of the children of the city. The KENTUCKIAN, then as now in the front ranks of progress and advancement, threw its energies into the work of establishing a creditable system of public schools by bonding the city to the extent of $20,000. The progressive element of our people, then much weaker than at this time, organized for the work and an election was called late in 1879. We all remember the fierce and bitter struggle in which even the press of the city was divided and how the victory was won by the earnest and almost superhuman efforts of the friends of the measure led by such men as R. M. Fairleigh, G. A. Champlin and others who were wise enough to foresee the great blessings that would be derived from these schools. Dr. Fairleigh and Mr. Champlin are no longer living but they lived long enough to see the schools all that they could have hoped for them.

The present building was erected in 1880 and on Dec. 31, 1880, Prof. C. H. Dietrich came to this city to confer with the Trustees in regard to the position of superintendent, they having been in correspondence with him. He came strongly recommended and the Trustees selected him from a large number of applicants to take charge of the schools.

On Feb. 7, 1881, the new schools were opened with eight teachers and 324 pupils. Prof. Dietrich went to work and it soon became manifest that he was the man for the place. Everything was systematized and in thorough running order within a very short time and by the end of the first half-session the success of the schools was assured. In the fall they reopened with an increased attendance and people soon began to flock into the city from surrounding counties and a census taken in 1885 showed that 2,500 persons had been added to the population of the city within five years. The schools above all things were instrumental in bringing about this rapid growth of the city. Year after year Prof. Dietrich has been re-elected and year after year the attendance has increased and one after another of the four reserve rooms in the school building have been occupied. This year there are 650 enrolled pupils and thirteen teachers, the janitor's room having been converted into a school room to accommodate the large overflow of pupils. The Trustees in order to meet future demands have lately bought another lot in the southern portion of the city and another building will be erected within the next two years. In this connection it is proper that a brief sketch of the man whose faithful work has largely contributed to make these schools what they are should be given.

Chas. H. Dietrich was born in Fredericksburg, Ohio, Sept. 19, 1819 and is the youngest of a family of eight children. His ancestors were from Germany and settled in Pennsylvania prior to the Revolutionary war, where his father, John Dietrich, was born. Prof. Dietrich was educated in his native village and in 1873 graduated from the Ohio Central Normal School at Washington and the next year entered Columbus University, from which he graduated in 1878. He taught two years in the public schools of Columbus when his health failed and he went to New Mexico, where under Government appointment he engaged in the mineral survey of that territory. After regaining his health he returned to Ohio and was the next year elected superintendent of our newly organized schools. Prof. Dietrich is personally an exceedingly genial, affable and popular gentleman. He is a thorough disciplinarian and possesses unusual executive ability. He is by nature endowed with the requisites of an educator and we doubt if he has any equal in the State in the particular branch of school work to which his talents are devoted. He enjoys the unlimited confidence of the patrons of the schools and the public at large and he has as many warm personal friends as any man in the city. He is a leading member of the Masonic fraternity, in which order he has attained a high standing.

He was married, Nov. 28, 1853, to Miss Minnie R. Lander, of this city. They have two children, Carl, a bright four-year-old, and Ruth, the baby and the idol of the household.

His Delicacy of Flavor

"O, smoking in the back library, sitting with his legs crossed, neglecting to properly adjust his necktie, and so on. There's no use fighting about such things. But when a man begins criticizing milliners' bills it is time for a woman to assert herself."—Philadelphia Record.
